artist's statement

Living beside this massive ocean, walking it's shores, seeing light transform colour in the sea, smelling the salt air, watching winds gust across tidal waves, peering at the tiniest Limpet on the beach, feeling the texture of lichen on trees in the rainforest, or catching the design of a feather as it floats down from a passing bird.

Painting my experiences of living on this dramatic coast of Western Canada over this past summer, sometimes I wonder if I have any control at all over subject matter. As I paint I think about human relationship and entanglements with nature. Often the meanings of my work lie just beneath the surface, hopefully offering an opportunity to take the time for sustained conversation.

artist's biography

Barbra Edwards is a Canadian visual artist who lives and works on Pender Island, BC. She studied Photographic Arts at Dawson College in Montreal, and majored in Photography and Design at Ryerson University in Toronto. Influential studies with Harold Klunder and earlier, with Peter Kolisnyk followed, while she supplemented studies with specifically chosen workshops in the U.S. and Canada.

The natural environment has long been a source of inspiration, with the plant and animal world having a major influence on her paintings. Edwards' highly refined colour sense in her work triggers people on an emotional level having nothing to do with verbal language. Hers is sensuous story telling, with line and brushstrokes that share with the viewer how the painting was made.
